6. Battle of Barnet – The battle of Barnet was on the 14th of April, 1471. Soldiers on each side: The Lancasters had around 15,000 and the Yorkists had around 10,000. The casualties were 1,000 for the Lancasters and 500 for the Yorkists. The winner was the Yorkists.

7. Battle of Tewkesbury – The battle of Tewkesbury was on the 4th of May, 1471. Soldiers on each side: The Lancasters had 6,000 and the Yorkists had 3,500. The casualties of the Lancasters were 2,000 and the casualties of the Yorkists are unknown. The winner was the Yorkists.

8. Battle of Bosworth Field – The battle of Bosworth was on the 22nd of August, 1485. In this battle, there were the Stanley family, but they stayed on the edge of the battlefield until they decided which side to support. Soldiers on each side: Lancaster had 5,000 soldiers, Yorkists had 10,000 soldiers and the Lord Stanley (Henry Tudor’s step-father) had 6,000. Finally, Lord Stanley joined his step-sons side. The casualties for the Lancasters were 100, whereas they Yorkists casualties was 1,000. The winners were the Lancasters.

After Richard III was killed 2 years passed, but that did not stop the Yorkists from attacking again on the final ever battle between house of Lancaster and house of York:

9. The Battle of Stoke Field: The battle of Stoke Field was the last ever war between the Lancasters and the Yorks. Soldiers on both sides were that the Lancasters had 12,000 and the Yorks had 8,000. The casualties of the house of Lancaster is unknown, however the house of York had 4,000 casualties, half of what they started the battle with. The winners were the Lancasters. With almost all of the Yorkist commanders killed in the battle, the future of King Henry’s rule and that of his Tudor dynasty was all but secured.

How it ended:

The War of Roses ended finally after going on for 30 years after Henry VII killed Richard III in the Battle of Bosworth and became king. He ended the fighting by Elizabeth of York combining the two houses together to make the house of Tudor.

The Ruling between 1422 – 1509: