RADICAL FEMINISM

Radical feminism is the branch of feminism that seeks to look into the reasons why women face some things in life. This is especially the kind of disagreement that has always kept gender superiority by men against women on course. When we talk of radical feminists, we refer to the people who always struggle to liberate women from the kind of oppression that women face in the society such as pornography and prostitution, subjection to abduction and rape, and forced birth as well.

In a bid to achieve this, the reduction of oppression against a certain gender mostly the female one, the radical feminist have engaged themselves in an attempt to achieve equality of all genders. The notion has always been that once gender balance is achieved. This is because they feel that this has something to do with moral degradation of women in the society.

The society is still divided on whether men and women have equal rights. Another sensitive area in this matter is whether some aspects of life such as prostitution makes women weaker. The manner in which radical feminists understand the issues surrounding prostitution is questionable. These feminists believe that prostitution is likely to end if equality is achieved between men and women.
