City of Rome
Rome was built on Seven Hills:

- Aventine Hill
- Caelian Hill
- Capitoline Hill
- Esquiline Hill
- Palatine Hill
- Quirinal Hill
- Viminal Hill

Roma, like all cities of very ancient foundation, did not have any pre-ordained scheme and many of its urban characteristics were due to the shape of the territory (including rivers, small hills and swamps then made to disappear with time) and ancestral customs.

The center of social life took place at the Roman Forum, stretched between the Capitol and the Palatine and was in close communication with the merchant area of Olitorio Forum, there was the river port on the Tiber and Pons Sublicius Bridge, which allowed the crossing of the river at the height of the Tiber Island.

The city was defended by the imposing walls built during the Tarquins Dynasty, the temples were built on the seven hills, the most ancient temples were built on the Capitoline Hill (for example the temple of Jupiter Optimus Maximus). The countryside was outside the walls, the people living outside the walls were the most affected during sieges, also the port of Ostia was outside the wall. The city had a square model, like the Etruscans cities.
