The rising popularity of bike-sharing programs in the country is observable not only among tourists but among the local residents as well. A smartphone app can be used to locate a nearest bike-sharing station wherein one can rent a bike. The popularity of the program is evident in Washington, D.C. where the first year of operation in 2010 recorded 1 million trips and another million in only eight months.