the idea. Even today, Marx thoughts about the dehumanising effects of money are still in play and used in some people's thinkings.

Charles Darwin
● 1809-1882
● Charles Darwin was a scientist and biologist. During his time, Darwin came up with a theory of natural selection known as Social Darwinism.
● Social Darwinism was a way to attempt to prove European dominance by stating that natural selection selects the most fit people for life. It was known as a “survival of the fittest” theory. This just created more racism and led to Europeans believing in their own dominance more. The theory of social darwinism and Charles Darwin himself are still being taught in school.

Simon Bolivar
● 1783-1830
● During his lifetime, Simon Bolivar freed six countries and was one of the most powerful political figures in history. Shortly after Simon became the leader of the revolt in Latin America.
● The aftermath of his involvement included the freedom of Latin America. He also founded Bolivia. Bolivar agreed to emancipation, a freedom of slaves and freedom as well as gain supplies from Haiti. Also, he was capable of freeing many slaves in Latin America.

Hong Xiuquan
● 1814-1864
● Hong Xiuquan was a civil service examiner who believed he was the son of God and younger brother of Jesus. He claimed he was sent to reform China.
● Xiuquan was the leader of the Taiping Rebellion and he declared his own dynasty during the rebellion. He also converted to a Chinese specific Christianity. Hong also attacked Confucian ideals and teachings and eventually he was murdered.

1. When the industrialization period rolled around, it changed many aspects of the world. Social structures were effects because industrialization strengthened the standings of the upper class, but the lower class were not able to make enough to move up in the social class. Also, factory owners began gaining a lot more wealth, leaving their employees out to dry. There were very rare incidents where an entrepreneur was able to gain much success. Along with social, immigrants began coming to America to try to better their own social status. Immigrants also came to America looking for jobs to gain a good financial status. The newly industrialized country had many new jobs in favoritess which would benefit almost anyone looking for work. Women and children were even allowed to work some factory jobs. This made it so that there could be multiple sources