In Kirtland The Mormons bought lots of land and became rich. They opened banks and shops and built a temple, mill and printing press. Soon the Mormons outnumbered the Christians. When the banks collapsed all the money that the Christians had put into the bank was gone. This caused the Christians to blame the Mormons for losing all their money. Once again causing conflict between the Christians and Mormons leaving the Mormons being kicked out of Kirtland.

The Mormons then sought refuge in Missouri where they once again bought land and built farms and communities of shops and banks. They became friends with Indians and freed slaves. This caused dispute ending with them on the move once again.

This time they found a place in Nauvoo in Illinois however this wasn't for long. Originally Nauvoo was called Commerce but it was, for some reason, renamed Nauvoo. It was here that they started practising polygamy. This unfortunately ended with Smith being killed and the Mormons once again being kicked out of Nauvoo and the Mormons having to choose a new leader called Brigham Young.

Brigham Young's first challenge was to take 16,000 Mormons across the Great Plains. He calculated it would take 18 months to do. This was a problem because they wouldn't be able to get across the plains by the end of the summer meaning spending the winter on the plains. However the Great Plains are home to freak weather, in the summer it was extremely hot and in the winter it was extremely cold. This would cause a problem with the potential death of the elderly and young.

Brigham Young however did complete this challenge by taking a group of 200 farmers and builders on a trip and on the way he left 5-10 men at some locations to build camps and stop off points for the next lot of travelers. When they got to the final destination they started to build a town. They dig irrigations dishes and they managed to build some farming plots so by the time others had arrived they could easily settle into the houses and farms.

This area of land they had moved to was called the great salt lake. This was originally part of Mexico until there was a war and the United States took it. The Mormons home started to grow and it grew into what was called Salt Lake City. The Mormons sent missionaries to Europe to the crowded cities where they spread word for a perpetual immigration fund. Where the Mormons will pay for your passage and plot of land and wagon and everything you'd need on your journey to Salt Lake City. Of course they had to pay this back only when they started earning. In 1860-70 a lot of Europeans were trying to escape religious persecution and crowded cities and the work houses.
