The Family builds up your social status, your education, and builds up confidence in children on how they will succeed. The School enlarges children’s social world to include people with backgrounds different than who they are. This is where they learn about important factors such as race and social position. The Mass Media increases our exposure to diverse cultures and provoke discussion of current issues. It also shapes how we think.

Know the Socialization and the Life Course: Childhood, Adolescence, Adulthood, Old Age, Death and Dying (115-117)

In society Childhood is seen as the first twelve years of live. We believe that children are biologically immature. Once children reach adolescence they experience emotional and social turmoil as they try discover their identity. In adulthood is the time when most of a life’s accomplishments take place, such as pursuing a career and raising a family. Personalities are also formed at this time. Old age are the later years of adulthood and final stages of life itself. Death and dying is the end stage of life. It starts of ten with denial, followed by anger, negotiation, resignation, and finally acceptance.
