Vertical integration - the combination in one company of two or more stages of production normally operated by separate companies.

Horizontal integration - strategy where a company creates or acquires production units for outputs which are alike—either complementary or competitive. One example would be when a company acquires competitors in the same industry doing the same stage of production for the creation of a monopoly.