Overall it is difficult to tell whether most Germans had what they wanted in the new Nazi Germany because of the terror instrument forcing people to conform to Nazi thinking. However we can see that there were a lot of restrictive policies against different minorities, mainly anti-semitic laws being put in place but the fact was that these groups were minorities and not ‘most Germans’. Also the repression of women was disliked however many women adapted to the newfound image and enjoyed their role as mother. Finally the vast improvements to the economy which benefited everyone due to increased employment levels and the focus on becoming more self-sufficient really empowered the German people and it stirred the nationalist sentiments which had been brewing since the Treaty of Versailles. Therefore Hitler’s internal policy gave most Germans what they wanted due to Hitler’s modernistic targeting policies to please those across the voting spectrum.