The impact of European settlement on the indigenous people of Australia was disastrous. Within years of settlement of the Europeans, the numbers of Aboriginals decreased considerably. Estimates of the aboriginal population prior to European settlement vary from 318,000 to 750,000.