Low Capacity
State is able to function with a minimum of public interference or direct control
But its capacity to fulfill basic tasks is limited
State lacks the ability to fulfill basic tasks and is subject to direct public control and interference.
-Power highly decentralized among state and non-state actors; weak state.

Danger: state is ineffectual, limiting development, and slow development.
May provoke public unrest.
Danger: too low a level of capacity and autonomy may lead to internal state failure.

Demonstrates the difference between power and money.

What are the different forms of political legitimacy?
- Traditional, charismatic, rational-legal

How do states vary in autonomy, and how does this shape their power?
- High to low, changes if depend on public