

"Never," he responded.

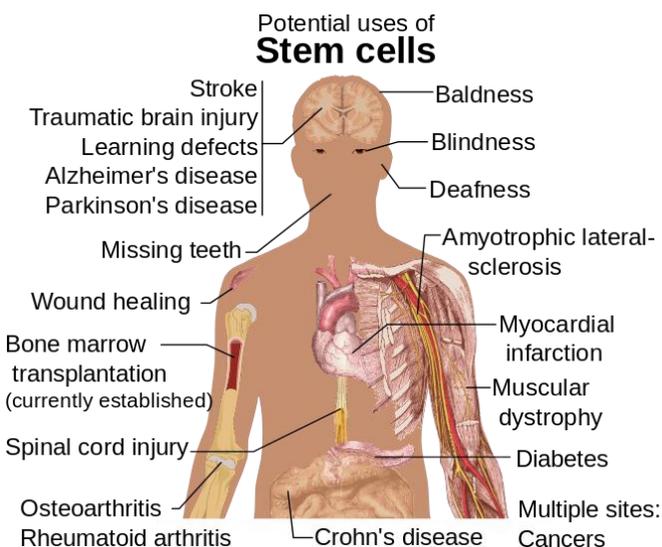

Doctors say his heart looks almost normal again. Ken Milles said he feels so normal, he never even thinks about his heart.

"It's like someone gave me a magic pill," he said. "I felt better all over suddenly. It's science fiction basically to me. That's what it feels like."

Now these are the first results of a unique study. Other researchers will have to try to replicate this, which could take two to three more years. But these first results seem promising
