

start. Juliet was childish and obedient, following all the mothers orders, and even calling her mother “madam” . Her deep love for Romeo then caused her to transform into a strong willed character as she defied her parents and refused to marry Paris. Being forced to marry Paris changed her into being independent and taking matters into her own hands by asking the Friar for help. And finally, Romeos death made her a courageous and brave character as she took her own life because she could not be with Romeo.
