

The first land plants (non-vascular bryophytes) had traits that equipped them to live on land, these included a reduced gametophyte phase, so water is only required for fertilization, structures similar to leaves, roots and stems & protection by layers of sterile cells