

Promoter

- The promoter (an example of a length of non-coding DNA that has a specific function) is the region of DNA that determines which gene will be expressed. This is because it is the site where RNA polymerase binds to in order to begin transcription
- The promoter also ensures that RNA polymerase can recognise which is the DNA template strand.