

6. With this principle in mind, counselors do not make interpretations of the client's problems or offer any premature suggestions as to how to deal with them, or solve the issues presented.

7. With this principle in mind, clients must be treated no matter how peculiar, strange, disturbed, weird, or utterly different they are from the counselor.

8. This principle requires the counselor to listen and understand the feelings and perspective of the client.

- II. Multiple Choice. Read the following items and choose your answer among the choices that follow.

9. This means that the counselor must provide the client unconditional positive regard, compassion, non-judgmental attitude, empathy, and trust.

- | | |
|-------------------|------------------------------|
| A. autonomy | C. personal integrity |
| B. social justice | D. respect for human dignity |

10. A counselor must foster partnerships with the various disciplines that come together to support an integrated healing that encompasses various aspects such as the physical, emotional, spiritual, and intellectual aspects.

- | | |
|----------------|-----------------------|
| A. autonomy | C. responsible caring |
| B. partnership | D. personal integrity |