

1. Evidence best supports the argument because it successfully described how society was splitting up in two completely different, hostile classes. Statement A supports evidence for why class conflict happened which could be used as evidence for the claim. I would not include any more evidence.
2. Death- In the picture you can see death operating the water pump which shows how the water most likely caused death because of the industrial revolution
 Water- These peoples' water has been ruined because of the industrialization of their city.
 Bourgeoisie- these people seem part of the middle class because of what they are wearing and how they were able to have multiple kids, this shows how the industrialization allowed for more people to coexist even though conditions were not safe.
 Well- The water wells are polluted because of industries.
 Pollution- The industrial revolution caused major pollution throughout the cities.
 Disease- The pollution was causing disease since death was coming from the water.

3.

Basic Summary	The basic summary of the document is about how workers gave their voice about socialism ideas through songs and how the songs gave expression to oppression and the hopes of people as they worked for a socialist future.
What aspects of the sourcing might impact your understanding of the document, and how?	The sourcing in the document would help me understand by showing an example of one of these songs and how it portrayed the ideas suggested.
What are the limitations of this document as evidence? What might make it hard to use?	The limitations of the evidence is how it could be interpreted many ways as a song and there's not much context provided.

4. Analyze the extent to which socialism supported workers' rights.
 Socialism supported workers rights to a mild extent. Workers had already created very public organizations to spread awareness of workers rights. Although, there were some democratic socialists that would make organizations fighting for workers rights but they had to be in secret.
1. Socialists attempted to challenge capitalism in this time period by one weird way, making songs about socialism, which seems a little weird, but is quite common now for social matters. Another way was more common and it was creating organizations to be able to have a party of socialists in the government.
