

– according to Castells, informationalism has distinct features such as a Space of Flows, in which informational flows bring physical spaces closer through networks, Timeless Time in which technology is able to manipulate the natural sequence of events, and Real Virtuality based on a hypertext reality and global interconnection which bends space and time relations

– Informationalism is completely distinct from industrialism due to the increasing technological development, storage and knowledge.

– In this paradigm, rules of creation and destruction is constantly and deliberately changed, based on interactions and adaptability.
