

D think rights and side constraints- on how to treat people.

Critical discussion about problems with side-constraints- pg 45-46. McNaughton and Rollings. Think about their discussion very carefully. Argue that constraints forbid their own violation even to minimize such violation

Why shouldn't you prevent the other shootings? If as D argue persons deserve respect as their uniqueness of rational moral agents then should it prevent you from harming others rather than requiring you to minimize harm?
