

which people from two different communities live, they do not trust each other. So they have two different schools, two different water tanks etc. Apparently none of which is in good condition. The teachers available in the village are divided between the two schools. Now suppose that a student of community A is interested in history, but due to lack of a good life teacher he does not get good guidance in his own school. Interestingly, the best history of the village is that of teacher community B and hence the teacher in another school. In this way, some students may lose their true potential due to caution between the two communities. The two communities trusted and respected each other, there would have been a single and more developed school, with all the best teachers available. This will help every student in the village regardless of their community. Ultimately, the village would have benefited greatly. National integrity does the same thing but on a much larger scale.

CONCLUSION OF NATIONAL INTEGRATION: India is a country of vast geographical diversity, where many religions, castes, tribes and sects live. To maintain national integration, it is necessary to participate in the elements of national integration. Following the path and ideals of great nationalists promotes national integration. For a developing country like India, which has been a victim of slavery for some years; It should be strengthened for national integration to avoid threats like communalism, casteism and regionalism. These self-governments challenge national integration, leading to assassinations, massacres and riots, etc. The addition of external elements and forces became restrictive to national integration. Progress the country always struggles to divide the country and struggle mutually; the revolution in Kashmir is supported by such external forces. Prolonged confusion in Kashmir has separated these areas from the national mainstream youth when the number of these disorganised elements exceeds, they struggle for complete isolation. These differences are the superiority of our culture, when unilateral, become a weakness for national unity and integration. We need to recall the stories of countless nationalists who laid down their lives to maintain national independence and sovereignty.
