

AU "Special Education "

EDUCATION

Practice Quiz

Question:

1. What is the difference between a speech and language impairment and a communication disorder?
2. What is the difference between a cognitive impairment and a developmental delay?
3. What is the difference between a traumatic brain injury and a neurological disorder?
4. What is the difference between physical therapy and occupational therapy?
5. What is the difference between a particular education resource room and a self-contained classroom?
6. What is the difference between mainstreaming and full inclusion?
7. What is the difference between homeschooling and virtual schooling?
8. What is the difference between private and public schools?
9. What is the difference between a vocational and an academic program?
10. What is the difference between a mainstreaming and a segregated setting?

Answer:

1. A speech and language impairment is a difficulty with communication and can include issues with articulation, fluency, or language. A communication disorder is a broader category that includes speech and language impairments and other conditions that affect a student's ability to communicate, such as autism.

A speech and language impairment refers to a difficulty with communication that can include issues with articulation, fluency, or language. These difficulties can make it difficult for students to express themselves and understand others, impacting their ability to learn and participate in the classroom. Speech and language impairments can include conditions such as articulation disorders, stuttering, and language disorders, such as developmental language disorder or specific language impairment.