

How to Earn Money from Beekeeping?

The easiest job for a farmer is beekeeping. the slovenians love their bees more than the honey.. Erik Luznar is one of the most famous and the youngest beekeepers in Slovenia. he shows how you can seriously consider beekeeping as a career choice by getting over your fear. Slovenia is the only country in the European Union to have protected their native Bee species. Slovenia's Carniolan. Honey bees are not aggressive, they are calm and don't sting you. the bees that you saw, are very friendly. normally, you don't need to wear big suits to be protected from them. but today, Erik put on the veil just to show it to you.. Erik will intentionally get stung by a bee.. Honey is the bee's food. and to collect that, the bees and the beekeeper has to work very hard.. bees have different needs each season. each season. this is why beekeepers have to be attentive always. if you don't find any honey, that means that they are starving..

Beekeeping isn't a difficult task. all you need to do is to keep track of the bees timely, every week. each box produces about 1kg of honey each week.. the Bihar government is promoting beekeeping.. There is a 90 % subsidy for each box. the box is priced at 4,000. so that costs about 400 after a subsidy of 3,600.. Beekeeping is a job that is much needed for our environment. onethird of food production in the world depends on the bees. the food systems all around the world survives with the help of bees. without the bees, humans won't survive. the bees lived here on this planet millions of years before the humans came. and they became jeopardised in the last few years and now we're trying to save them. and you're one of the saviours.. 20th May is celebrated as world Bee Day. Slovenia is credited for that. they requested this at the United Nations. the father of modern beekeeping, Anton Janča, is from Slovenia. he is renowned for beekeeping. the profession has everything that you can find in another job or career..