- 1- .Infants usually satisfy this very basic needs in the course of an ordinary day spent with their parents (feeding, kissing, bathing, etc.). However, if a baby is neglected or even mistreated by being deprived of touch, his development will suffer on all levels- physical, intellectual, and emotional. Some children have even been known to die from this lack of tactile simulation; it is thought by many doctors that many unexplained "crib deaths" are directly related to lack of touch and its various consequences. Children given out for adoption at a tender age and placed in poorly run orphanages, children brought up by unaffectionate parents, and children whose parents touch them only to beat them-all these types of children run the risk of never reaching their potential as fully developed adults.

The definitions found in a pocket dictionary are usually rather sketchy, and few or no example sentences are given to help the foreign student understand how the word is actually used in a sentence. Equally inadequate is the bilingual dictionary (Thai-English, Spanish-English, Russian-English, etc). This type of dictionary is often based on the idea of making word-for-word translations, a notion which shows no understanding of the idiomatic nature of all languages. Moreover, bilingual dictionaries are often hastily and sloppily compiled, as well as hopelessly out of date even before they are published.
