

A College Degree is needed to succeed in life

AGAINST THE MOTION

It is a widely held belief that a college degree is a window to success in our life. Persuaded by this idea millions of students themselves registered in different educational courses at the cost of hefty amounts, every year. But a scrutiny of the scenario may give you a totally opposite or different glimpse .i.e. a college degree is not imperatively essential for one to get succeeded in life. Considering this scenario I would like to go against the motion that a college degree is essential for success and I have my own points to defend my stance.

Firstly, a college degree can be set to be not so much important against the truth that there are other things or aspects which more often than not determine or mould one's success in one's life. And these are diligence and determination, hard work and confidence. So, it will be prevaricate to say that college degree is essential to success when there are other determinants.

Secondly, a college degree is not imperative to success in the respect of the fact that it puts financial heaviness on the back of the individuals who desire to get it from colleges and universities. A student requires to deposit five lakh rupees in one stroke to get admitted to a professional course. The expense reaches up to twelve lakh by the time the course is completed. In the case of courses like M.B.B.S or M.B.A the expense reach up to forty to fifty lakhs.

Thirdly, a college degree can be dismissed as mandatory for success in view of the fact that it is becoming increasingly marketable like other vendible commodities. The days are gone when a degree was achieved by a student with effort or perseverance. Now situation has been lowed to such a level that the colleges are forced to get the degree sold out than, get the student achieve it. So, a student though having a degree may not be skilled enough to work on the field. These kinds of examples are numerous on the pages of newspapers. So, it can be said, far from being the most essential quality, having a college degree is but a minimum quality to be successful in life.

Fourthly, necessity of college degree for success can be denied against mentioning of the name of persons who shine bright in the aspect of success without a college degree. The names are many, for example, the name of Steve Jobs can be sited. The American Business magnet was a college dropout. Moreover, this kind of examples can be seen around us if we have eyes to see. The recently circulated B. Tech Panipuriwala bears testimony to this. Even we see many becoming professionally successful without a college degree.

In view of the above arguments it can be said that a college degree is not the only window to success.