Dear friend,

I can hardly believe that your father is no more. The news came to me just like a bolt from the blue. Only a month ago I received a very affectionate letter from your father and he offered me much good advice. But death snatched him away so cruelly! I know he had a mild stoke last year. But he looked so cheerful and fit. He was so kind to me that I feel it as a personal loss to own myself. May his soul rest indeed.

myself. May his soul rest preace.

you know, what is lotted can not be blotted.

yet words, I know, are poor comforters. "
The heart knoweth its own sorrow ", speaks to soul. I can only trust to the healing effect of time and pray to God for the strength that will help you to bear the misfortune.
