

Task 1

Nelson Mandela is a role model for many people because of his politics and actions, he was one of the few that stood up for himself and his country. He worked hard and never gave up that is one of the reasons that he was well liked and a role model for many people, as I said he is not the only one that has stood up for himself and his country we also know many people has done this because they want a change in their country.

I think that Nelson Mandela reminds me of another role model with the name Martin Luther King. I know that Martin and Nelson worked hard to achieve something big that changed the world and how other people think and that is why they never will be forgotten. They will always be remembered as heroes.

Task 2

I will compare Armpit to Malala, they both have problems of their own that I think are very similar. Malala handles her problems with politics while Armpit does it with violence and that is what the big difference is between them, but they are very similar to like the issues they have. Malala fights for women rights to go to school and get an education while Armpit is always teased and bullied because he is black and different from others they have the same problem and that is discrimination, they are being discriminated Malala could not go to school because she is a woman. Armpit is a little different thing and that is racism he is discriminated and people were being racist, that is why I chose to compare these two because both were discriminated by other people and I think it was kind of alike the way they were treated.

Task 3D

There are black people staring at the white people and they look confused because they have never seen something like them before they are so different. The setting is pretty nice it looks very clean and very beautiful. The black boy seems to be very calm but confused because he has only seen black people in his life and no other race than what he is. The area they are moving into looks nice and they all look so confused they all just stare at each other like they