

Love making Love

It is very important when you do something to love it and I mean the real meaning of this word. That is to say, Like the shape and effects of this thing along with the influence it usually leaves upon you. If really know this meaning and honestly tried to allocate it in things around you, you will find many things that you love and can not live without.

The idea of love is a basic and vital factor that really dominates our lives and we all should give better attention to this factor in a way that maintains its existence and maturity. Nobody can live without love in his life whatever kind of love he has and in whatever way he acts. If the teacher loves his students and the doctor loves his patients and the desk man loves his job, and on all different level of responsibility, we should have a really beautiful world that shines with love and respect among all people involved.

One of the important things in our lives is making love. This thing really has a great part of many of people's lives and this is because why we should really care about things and do our best to bridge any gaps to it with your true partner. Everyone when stepping the first step towards making love with a partner thinks of how shall he be capable of showing his hidden and sometimes "fake" power and how much will he be praised and thanked for the nice time he gave to the other one. The only thing that stays in his sick mind is himself and how he will act and what impression will he leave with no regards to the needs and feeling of his partner. Actually, this leaves a really bad effect on the other side and instead of being thanked and appreciated, he receives direct "or inner" assault which makes him depressed and not willing to continue what he had started while his partner would not allow him to continue even if he was willing to. So, the whole matter ended up with a disaster to both of them. What can they imagine if they just restarted the story from the early beginning.

I believe that the main reason here is the lack of love feelings and mutual respect which leads to a hell of aggressive actions with more stupid reactions. We all have to appreciate the real meaning of this magic word "love" which I consider as the key note to happiness in our life.
