Now you're good to go!

Note: Like you read earlier, registration procedures in the other websites I gave are almost the same... maybe one or two variations!

You can see from what past buyers had to say, that this particular seller has nice great ratings, so fit to do business with. Settled? For a quick guide on how to search for products and order, click here <http://bit.ly/XkWix0>

Getting the Cheap Price & Free Shipping on 98% of Your Orders.

Getting sellers to relax their conditions is not difficult as many people think. Now, all the products on these import portals are pre tagged with specific fixed prices... but with much familiarity, you can get the sellers to either reduce their price or wave off the shipping fee. This trick works!

Here's a little sneaky trick I use; it has proven to work 98% of the time. Please, do not abuse it. First, I get them to chat with me. This portrays some level of seriousness in you. They start to wonder why this buyer has opted for something a little bit different. "He/she could be a serious buyer" they wonder!

Be friendly with them... crack jokes and try to develop personal relationship with them. If possible, ask for their phone numbers, yes call them if you can! I tell them I'm a wholesaler in my country, and that I am new to aliexpress (or any of the portals!), hence, looking for trusted suppliers who will be able to do serious business with me at favorable prices. (The new to aliexpress drives them crazy!)

Tell them how there's great demand for their product in your country, and that you're currently trying out a couple of sellers on the import website... Whoever sells to you favorably automatically wins your heart and becomes your lifelong supplier.

Just tell them you're interested in their product... and if they can promise to serve you favorably, you can forget every other seller you ought to have contacted and order from them. At this point, the seller should say YES... we're ready to serve you fine! Ask them if they can reduce the price for you.

They will likely want to make you a lifelong customer. Hence, may want to relax their conditions to win you over. Now, don't expect to win on every case using this method. At times, you may find stubborn sellers stick to their conditions.

In such case, you either dance to their tune or move to the next shop. Remember, there are thousands of them in each of the portals. The truth is, if you do your homework well, build a tight rapport with the seller, you must get some sort of discounts from the original price.

Let's look at another example, a product that requires you to pay shipping fee. You find a product that comes with some shipping fee...
(Shipped through either DHL, FedEx or EMS!)

In most cases, except when you're talking about high priced products, the cost of shipping a product through any of these aforementioned means is always greater than the cost of the product itself. In that case, here's what you do to have the product shipped free to you...

Note: I can guarantee that you'll get free shipping for all products that come with some shipping fee, but won't guarantee that 100% of the time, you'll get your item shipped free via any of DHL, FedEx or EMS.

Get that? Free shipping all the time, but must not be shipped via any of DHL or EMS.

Note: Make sure to inspect the goods received, and certify them okay before clicking on the order confirmation link, as this action is irreversible!

However, if by chance the item falls short of what you expect or what was advertised, all you do is to contact the seller to demand explanations.

Most of the time, the seller will love you guys to settle amicably, because if he doesn't and you leave a bad review for him, it will affect his rating and subsequent sales. He may decide to compensate you on your next order... either by adding additional items or sending your next order via DHL for free.

However, if the seller is adamant and proving stubborn, proceed to clicking on Open Dispute in the case of Aliexpress, to report. If you open a dispute, your case will be looked into and decided based on the facts you provide. This is where you can quote all your correspondences with the seller, even before the order was made. If the seller laid claim of anything about his product that later turned out to be a lie, say it and give proof. If judged in your favor, which would likely be the case if you present your case with facts, you'll be required to return the item and have your money refunded to your card with 5 working days.

In the case of item not received, contact the seller first. Then, if he's not helping matters, contact the site admin with your tracking number. They'll track it if you have not yet picked up the item, and they will refund you. Never be tempted to use this method as a way to dubiously getting your money back after receiving your ordered item. If you dare, you'll be caught pants down and your account terminated.

Here's a screenshot showing the tracking details of orders I placed recently.

Method 3

Get A Shop

Yes, if the money starts rolling in and piling up, get a shop! And if you're already engaged with other things, get a shop keeper. I don't even need to tell you that you'll be making double, if not triple of what you've been making (without a shop) if you finally get a shop. No wonder Matilda got her shop after 3 months of selling direct to retailers.

Now, a Brazilian hair she would have sold for GHC250 to her retailer can easily be sold for GHC350 at the shop.

Receiving Your Goods & Making the Postman Your Friend

Well, receiving your items is the easiest and the sweetest thing I've noticed out about this business... because even if we end up buying stuff at cheap prices and they don't get delivered to us, that will amount to total failure. Depending on the courier service you use, your item could either be delivered to your house by the courier company or you might be called upon on phone to come and pick it up from their office.

I've noticed that whenever I use any of China Post, Hong Kong post, my package gets to the local post office. And what they normally do is to call me on phone to come pick it up. Even, when my orders are sent via any of FedEx, EMS or DHL, 90% of the time, they will still call you to come for your package or custom clarification.

So, to make sure my packages are always safe... I found a way of befriending the customs or last person my package gets to before I get it. I get their numbers and then try to chip them something whenever I have a package. By that, they handle my packages with preference and try to ensure they are in safe hands... because they know I treat them right.
