

Analysis :

This is a short story written by me

It's a metaphor about English Language Teaching (ELT)

The Magician is the teacher and the paintings are the students.

Also The Maestro can be a teacher and the musicians would be the students.

I imagined the Maestro as a sorcerer who has the power of magic, he can change whatever he likes about the paintings, by adding colors (which symbolizes the skills and lessons that a teacher can give to his students). So it's exactly the role of a teacher, when he tries to do his best to correct and improve his students level.

Painting 01 : was full of dark colors : it means the student is a dark person.

Painting 02 : was full of random and upside down stuff : it means the student is an unorganized person.

Painting 03 was blank : it means the student is lazy.

Now, when the magician added colors to the paintings he is correcting his student.
